Describe how your system meets the System Requirements (R1, R2, and R3)

R1 is met since we have a system where 3 nodes can start, and each node acts as both a gRPC server and a client to the two other nodes, which lets them all talk to each other as is done in Ricart-Argawala. We emulate the critical section by logging ENTER_CS, then waiting for 1 second and then loggin EXIT_CS. Each node asks for access to the critical section on their own random timer which means any node can request access at any given time.

R2 is met as a node can only enter after both the other nodes have replied to its request to enter. A node will hold back its reply while it itself is in the Critical Section or while its waiting itself to enter the critical section and its request is older than the one that just came. They compare based on the lamport clock, and if a tie by their id where the lower one wins. Both nodes will be comparing the same timestamps, so only one of them can ever get all the replies and enter, while the other will be waiting its turn.

R3 is met since a node will only hold back replies to request that are newer than its own or while its in the Critical Section, and sends all of them when it leaves. That means the oldest request always gets it next.

Provide a discussion of your algorithm, using examples from your logs (as per Technical Requirement 5)

We have implemented Ricart-Agrawala with Lamport clocks, where a node that wishes to enter the critical section, sets itself to WANTED, and then sends a request with its lamport time to the other nodes in the system, and it will not enter until all the other nodes have answered. The reply is the response of the gRPC call so holding a reply just means that the call does not return until the node exits.

The log lines below is from the beginning of our run, here we can see that Node 2 asks first with lamport 1, and then node 1 replies right away. Then node 1 asks with lamport 4 and node 2 holds that reply back because 1 is less than 4. Then node 3 starts running a little bit later and replies to both requests, so now node 2 enters the critical section first, and then when node 2 exits the critical section, it sends the held reply back to node 1, which now has both replies and then enters.
